

Assignment 1 Documentation - Jasmine Rutherford

Header and nav- I made them fixed to the screen and made the nav buttons react when you hover over them

Footer - Kept it simple to fit the style of my website

-Contact page:

- I designed my contact to be in the center of the page
- Removed borders so it would look softer and fit more with the theme of my website

- Added different-sized paddings and used <flex-direction:column;
- 4 inputs (first name, last name, email, and a space for messages)

Art gallery - I wanted to make an art portfolio to display my art as my image gallery

- Used transitions to make the images pop out when you hover over them, and made them last a certain amount of time (0.3s)
- Images react when you change the screen size to fit smaller devices. Min 3 images next to each other on smaller settings

Index- Short home page with a banner image showcasing my art

- Added text over the banner and in the main section

CV- Added 2 columns, one for contacts and the other for lists with my cv info

- Added a shadow box around the 2nd column to make it more legible

About me- Kept it simple, and added two images

- Under the headers i wrote a short story and a list of my hobbies.

greatest cook didn't mean I couldn't try. So, I grabbed the tofu out of the fridge, and as soon as it hit the cool autumn breeze, it exploded. BOOM!!! Tofu everywhere, on the walls, the ceiling, and all over the floor of the dorm room. It was a disaster I cried. My plans, my future, all destroyed by a bag of tofu, but the show had to go on. With tofu still all over the dorm room, I started boiling water. The broccoli had to be steamed! Next was the rice and sauce, which I made out of soy sauce, honey, and chopped onion. I was too nervous to try it, so my sister got most of it. It was so good...if only there was tofu to go along with it. My friends (friends no longer) made fun of my tofuless tofu meal. Just because there was only broccoli and rice, and a sad smidge of sauce on my plate, doesn't mean it was bad. After eating, I vowed to never touch tofu again... The end The end

My very clean dog, Velvet (✿✿✿)

About me

Hello there!

My name is Jasmine Rutherford and I have a very cute dog named Velvet.

One day, at the IMC Kolping dormitory, I decided to make a very exotic meal for lunch. Tofu, with steamed broccoli and rice, what could go wrong... The recipe seemed simple enough, and just because I wasn't the greatest cook didn't mean I couldn't try. So, I grabbed the tofu out of the fridge, and as soon as it hit the cool autumn breeze, it exploded. BOOM!!! Tofu everywhere, on the walls, the ceiling, and all over the floor of the dorm room. It was a disaster I cried. My plans, my future, all destroyed by a bag of tofu, but the show had to go on. With tofu still all over the dorm room, I started boiling water. The broccoli had to be steamed! Next was the rice and sauce, which I made out of soy sauce, honey, and chopped onion. I was too nervous to try it, so my sister got most of it. It was so good...if only there was tofu to go along with it. My friends (friends no longer) made fun of my tofuless tofu meal.
